RICHIE RICH in

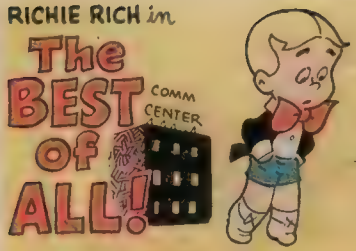
The BEST of ALL!



For the third straight year the city's community center was turning to Richie Rich for its annual all-star show night. And, as usual, Richie answered: "Of course, I'll be glad to do what I can."

"Oh, don't we know it," smiled Mr. Goodheart, who was once again chairman of the committee. "Last year you got us Sammy Mavis, Sr. and Dean Barton and Frank Swimatra and Sha-la-la and Carole Queen." And he could have gone on almost forever.

"And don't forget the year before that," Mrs. Noble, the assistant chairman, chimed in. "Richie got us Paul Oldman, Robert Greenford, Cher and Cloudy, Carly Cryman and so many others."

"I'll bet this year Richie will do even better than ever before," suggested Mrs. Nicely, the assistant-assistant chairman.

Richie wondered how that could be possible, but nevertheless he said, "I certainly will try."

The moment the committee left the magnificent Rich mansion, Richie dashed for the phone. He hadn't been given that much time . . . the annual show night was only two weeks away. Somehow with all the work the committee had for itself, they had simply forgotten about getting the show together. And the weight of it all was now resting on the poor shoulders of Richie Rich.

As fast as Richie could dial, he dialed. As fast as he could talk, he was talking. And what did he come up with?

"You say Mr. Mavis will be in Las Vegas."

"Ohhh, Mr. Barton is in London, eh."

"You don't know where Mr. Swimatra is."

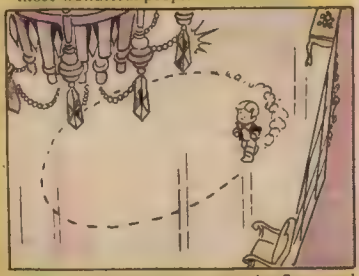
"Paul Oldman is on location."

"All the members of Sha-la-la are visiting their parents—and that's in nine different states."

And so on.

And so forth.

"What am I to do?" Richie said to himself in utter surprise. "I can't get a single one of my friends. Am I going to d-disappoint all those wonderful people?"



Poor Richie began to pace the floor, and when you live in the largest house in the world—you have some floor to pace. An hour later, he had finished pacing the ground floor of the left wing, and he shrieked with delight: "I've got it."

(PASTE OR SCOTCH TAPE ON A POSTCARD)

That's when he made a batch of entirely new calls and came up with excited, happy affirmative replies.

"Oh, I'd love to, Richie."

"Do you think it would really work?"

"Oh, my, I'm so happy you asked."

And so on.

And so forth.

By the time of the third annual all-star show night, an air of anticipation could be felt throughout the city. The community center was agog with excitement. As usual, no names of the performers were announced, but everyone had ideas.

You could hear people say things like . . .

"I hear Jerry Rewis will be here tonight."

"Really? And I heard Johnny Autoson will be here."

"And I heard Groucho Sparks."

"All I know is I heard it's going to be the best of all shows."

So you can imagine the hush that hung over the audience when they gathered in that huge civic center auditorium and Richie Rich walked to the middle of the stage.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "as you know this is the third annual all-star night show. And this year we're going to do something very different than we've ever tried. We think we're going to bring you the best of all shows."

"See, I told you it was going to be the best of all," someone said.

"Shhhh," someone else said, angrily.

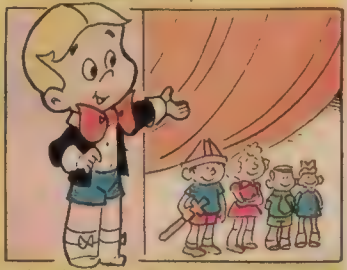
"Now for our first act tonight," Richie went on, "we're going to bring you that great magic act—Marvin Miracle!"

A litlly kid wearing a top hat and dragging an actual paper bag of tricks walked on the stage, and the audience gasped.

"Huh?" more than one said.

"What is this?" said a few.

"I never heard of him," said a lot.



But before the night was through, everyone there knew Marvin Miracle well . . . had fallen in love with Bobby the Ventriloquist, the singing act of the Benson Sisters, that little commedian Robby Resnick, the Fourth Grade Glee Club and twenty other acts that Richie had organized for the night—every act made up of members of the community center itself!

Yes, the kids of the neighborhood made everyone agree that without question they had presented the best show of all!
